Subject: Microsoft ruling not sufficient

My opinion of the 'punishment' against Microsoft.

Because of the way Microsoft has treated competitors and consumers, the corporation should be separated into two (or more) separate companies. One company should be charged with developing the OS and OS-only related technologies. The other company (or companies) should be charged with working on pure applications such as Word, Excel, Office, etc. These two (or more) companies should work as rivals with competing technology; not as incestuous children getting one over on their parents (the government).
